RED BLOOD AMERICANISM IS COMING TO THE FRONT

Right now this Country is calling for men of stout hearts and sound bodies. It needs them to keep Old Glory triumphant and unsullied in the air.

The exigency now confronting us emphasizes, as nothing else could do, the importance of good health, both as an individual and national asset.

It gives point to the suggestion, often emanating from this office, that everybody should guard their health as a priceless possession. When you find yourself running down and not exactly keyed up to the fighting pitch, as is the case with everybody at times. You ought to come to Nature's relief and take a course of

Their Hero

By RICHARD MARKLEY

One of the idiosyncrosies of youth is an averappreciation of what is pleasing to the eye. A boy of sixteen is more absorbed in the cut of his clothes than ever made in his life. The love of personal adornment is supposed to remade with a woman co long at she lives they out of her teens she is won rather by devotion than good looks. But a girl from lifteen to twe dy is as much charmed by what is usually denominated handsome in a boy as the boy is by resplendent neckwear. Neither the boy nor the girl attaches much importance to merit.

Tom Berryman, aged elgiteen, the son of a well to do widow, persuaded his mother to permit him to give a house party in her country home, which she did not intend to occupy during the summer. The bunch Tom trained with was composed of boys and girls of aged varying from fourteen to eighteen, though none of the girls was quite seventeen. Six boys and six girls were invited to the house party, and all accepted at once, for none of them had ever been so homored before.

Mrs. Berryman had an infilmate friend, a Mrs. Archibuid, whose only son, fleginald, was of a proper age to be invited to the house party. Mrs. Berryman, desiring to show attention to her friend, made it a condition of giving up her country house to her son and her friends that fleginald Archibuid should receive an invitation to be one of the party.

Tom consented and had been sufficlently trained in social dealings to notify the other boys that Reginald Archibald, being a stranger, should receive especial attention from them. As to the girls. Tom knew that if they did not happen to fancy young Archibatd they would not be likely to put themselves out of the way to do lim honor.

when the shad appeared on the scene be was found to be what a girl of sixteen would call hardsome. His complexion was plak and white. He was rather tall for his age and delicately farmed. He possessed a well turned neck and throat and wore a hyranic color-not at all in fashion—which showed the features to advantage. He at once gave the impression that he honored the company in appearing among them and that he expected to be treated with especial consideration.

As his been remarked, young ladles of sixteen are like the fish that go for the glittering spoon that whit's in the simshine at the end of a line. Reginald's idak and white complexion, his soft brown eyes, his artistically tumbled hair and, above all, that threat, rising above the broad, rolling collar, capitivated every girl in the party. Moreover, his admirers were too young to have received proper training in restraining themselves in such matters, and Mr. Archibald at once became their hero.

Even had the girls refrained from showing their admiration for the youngster with the plak and white complexion the other boys would doubtless have discovered it. They were not envious of him, but his receiving all the attention to the entire exclusion of all the rest of them was certainly calculated to mar the pleusure of the party. No one of them cauth make an engagement with any girl intil she had learned whether Regimild Archibadd would honor her with a like invilation. If a boy were chatting with a girl she was forever easiling glances at the Adonis, evidently more interested in getting blan away from the girl he was with than in hier companion.

The longer this concentrated attention of the girls upon bim lasted the mere Mr. Archibald seemed to consider it a matter of course. Instead of pointing ont to the girls the want of wisdom in their course he rather encouraged their in following it. Instead of endenvoring to be one of the party of hoys he held aloof from them, securing to consider the society of girls preferate. On the whole, the young fellows were quite excusable in being up in arms against both the girls and their hero for spoiling their fun.

They put their beads together to concort some scheme to show up the ider able Adonly and reinstate them elve in the good graces of the girls, one and all ogreed to a to a the old saving "Absence makes the beart prox The result openies for fisel . the morning vaca the glifs came on to frenkfast the lather grea need that a nee of the beacher! o tiching, some to a basebuit match bly by left of hence the their. A SOPRANO-TENOR

By NORMAN THORNDYKE

After a number of ventures In a min sheetheatrical way I organized a comic opera company, which I took "on the My sluger were not with an one of parts to hear at the Mcfropolitan thera Therse he New York, I it were good or night for the au de ces they were intended for White I we ex-amining candrines for as the tellidy's part a young weman care to me who de in I the position. I tried her voice, but could not quite place it. It was not exactly a parameter was it exactly an alter bear between the two, Sometimes it someth a little like a man's tenor. I did not exactly fancy it, but no other woman presented herself for the position except one who wanted too large a solary, and I engaged the applicant. Miss Winifred Richie she gave as her real name and tild me Hat I was at liberty to use it

Miss Richle was a very good looking young woman. She was attractive in all respects excepting that in ordinary conversation her voice was pitched rather low for a woman and seemed a irlife harsh. But this did not prevent her turning the heads of several of the male singers. Marlonelli, my tener, whose real mane was O'Grady, became desperately smitten with her, and his witentions being not to her liking I was in constant strend of losing one or both of them in the idddle of the sen son and out on the read, where I could not repair the deficiency

The trouble with O'Grady was that he was not a man of any retinement, and no rebuff could stand him off. One day my leading hely came to me and said that if I did not find a way to relieve her of his attentions alle would take the univer bits her own limits.

"What course will you take?" I ask ed. Will you silek a pin by fam.
"No Pil stick nothing into him, but he'll get an eve that will keep him off

the bards for a week."

I smiled at the idea of a wedness repell gurb ver in to hashton. The I asked her in what way triffredy of fend d her. She replied that is love seen or in the two which they were compelled to not together he was much more denon-stative than was to be sary In a stage out r.

I had a tack with excited, to which I told ldm that Mr . By hic would be burger arcell his artenions and me less he would let her alone I would send blin off as soon as I could replace blim. For my warding was not effective. In the very next performance he offended a salu. Nothing occurred untit the cuttain was lowered at the ond of the act, when Miss Richle land ed a blow on O'Grady's eye that turn ed it a sickly green.

I was nucli just out with Miss tileble for incapacitating my tenor and rated

"Miss Turnlee, my imderstudy," she said, "is quite capable of taking my part, and I will take (C) trady's part."

"l'Il tuke (CGrady's part. I can sing

After she lead convinced me that she was serious I tried her voice and found that it was a far better tener than so

"What does this mean?" I asked her "It means that I can sing in two different volces."

The next performance was given as she had suggested, Miss Hichie being dressed as a man, and she produced a far better lapression than O'Gindy ladeed, as a man singer she was for more value to me than tillirady or than she was In a sopranc's part.
His love for Miss Richte had not enhanced by the blow he had received from her, and now that he had been discharged on account of it he Into the wings and began to abuse her When she had given him the black eye she had taken him quawares. Now she had the advantage of being untrainincled by skirts and stepped towars hlm with clinched tists. averse to such an afterention with a woman he had so recently loved, he retreated. But she followed him me and by a quick stroke landed her tist under his firm, litted lam off his first and sent him sprowling on the bourds Hearing something drop, 1 run to the scene of action and prevented and more fighting. I put (Cleady out and told blur nor to show hin self to me or any of my company again. The next day I made a new contract with Miss tileble, doubling her sulary to sing tenor parts and put her under study permanently in her place. lener was seen recognized by a few persons who had seen idni in a womun's part and it began to be whispered that he was Miss Richle and no Signor Marascherlo, as he was adver-ilsed. The fact that I had a woman singing a man's parts drew the curloms, and my attendance increased. In tline they became so large that I gave my tenor mother rulse, and fluilly he was receiving as much in a month as before he had received in a year.

I brought my company back to my starting point when the warm wenther came on and disbanded it. I asked Miss Richie If she would sign a con-tract for the next year, and she agreed so on condition that her true sex should be known. Then a secret came

Tom Thurston, a good lenor sluger who could sing marvelously like a woman in falsetto, hearing that I wanted a soprano, had appeared to me in woman's gurb and applied for the place as Miss Hichle.

"Here he is," said the man who cripped me. "Some one must have put him in. Itut he is not sewed up. That must be done at once. Schnebler, come here."

Some one came and sewed up the sack. Very soon after this I was carried to the forward deck. There was some kind of service, but I did not know enough of the German language to determine what it was Then I fet the logird on which I was placed tilted and I ald Intecold water

I hand live gone down forty feet and was thinkly that I would reve stop when my feet struck holt in a """ ene organish me, for the challens will Indocred that I was near and 1 cm off the weight that pulled me down a of finished freeleg myself le custime ray were off of the suck; then, but ing my feet as a next the such, I rose rapelly to the sounce. The first thing I old on gettler, my head above water was to box for the cruiser. Seeing for some breath and darked to give her time to

By ETHEL HOLMES

"Anything for me today, Sam?" asked a girl of a rural postman tradg-lag along a road in Tennessee.

"Yes; I recken I got one for you, Susle," said the man, tooking over $ bundle of letters he carried in his hand Not tashing it, he dived down into his bag and fulled out its contents, which he sandhed carefully.

"Well, now, that knocks me out," he said, with troubled and puzzled ex-pression on his face. "When I sorted the letters for my route at the post-

"And H's gone?" cried the girl in a frightened tone.

"Wali till I look 'em over again." He examined every letter ugain and with the same result as before. He serns hed his head in thought.

"I stopped at the tavera for something to warm me and threw my bag nlown on a chair."

"Oh, Sam! Was there any one in the room with you?" "Let me see, There was a lean, hungry booking man in spectacles"—

"And a red heard?"
"Pears to me he had a red beard."

The gld turned and ran away from the postman, who followed her with his eyes till she was out of sight. Suste Barker, the girl in question, ran till she came to the tavern. There she stopped and asked the landlotel which way the man with a red beard had gone. He had departed immediate ly after the postman had gone in the direction of the Cumberland plateau, the base of which was but a mile distant. Susle set out at a run, but she could not keep such a pace and soon settled into a hurrled walk. A short distance from the footbills she saw the man she was after ascending the lill. She knew the tralls leading up to the plateau and siruck into one that was shorter than that the man was taking She had not gone far before the two paths crossed. Sltiling down on a stone, she waited for him to come to

"Howdy," she said to the stranger then he came up.

"Itowdy," replied the man, scrutinizing the girl. "Y're not lost, are y'?" ing the girl. "Well, I dunno. I come up hyer to find n gal I know, and I thort she lived purty algh this place, but I don't find her somehow. I alu't used to these mountings. I never come up this way."

She looked exhausted and troubled. She was very plainly dressed, but was rather comely for a rough country girl. "Is there anything I can do for you?"

"Nothlin', nuless you can put use on the track to flud my friend I'm lookin' for. But mebbe you're a strauger in these parts yerself."

The man locked measy. He had good reason to shake the girl, but did not exactly know how to go about it. You're right there. I don't see how can help you, since I'm not familiar with the country about here." The girl looked about her with troubled glances. The man started to

"Yer not goin' to leave a pore gal out liver on this lonely hillside, air 'T' she said, looking at him repreach-

"I don't see how t can help it," sald "I don't know where you the man. vant to go, and I've got to get on my-

'li' y' mind my goln' on with y'?" she usked pitifully.

"Well, I don't see how I can do that." was the reply, "seein' that I'll have to walk a great deal faster than you can." "Try me."

min looked perplexed. He ouldn't very well leave a glrl who was st on the mountain side, and in the business in which he was engaged she would be nu obstacle to film. Indeed, be could not very well accomplish it without getting rid of her.

"I haven't time to bother with you," he said crabbedly. "All you got to do ls to go down the mountain and you'll find plenty of persons to tell you how

With that he started on, but, hearing a sob, turued and saw the girl with her hands to her face, shaking convul sively.

There is no weapon so powerful as a woman's tears. The man jurned and went back to the girl. Ite did not get away from her for an hour. Plest be spent a good deal of time soothing her. Then she told blm that she sprained her ankle and could not walk. l'innily footsteps were heard coming from above, and a young man ap peared on the trail. He started on seeing the girl and the man.

"t reckon," said the girl to the man with the red beard, "that this feller will take me down. Much obleeged to you all the same."

The man addressed looked the other over and without a word started up the trail. The two watched him till be was out of sight, then the girl threw her arm around the newcomer.

"Ite's got the letter you wrote me 1 reckened it had the way to find you hild down purty clear, hadn't it?"

"He tuk it from the posiman, I followed him and have been delayin' him hyar, hopln' to find some way to warn

"Welt, he'll get the still, but he won't get me.

Clasped in each other's arms, they rejoiced that the delay she had caused had saved him from arrest and perhaps a term of imprisonment. "Better give up makin' whisky, Ben,"

the said.
"I'll do it for your sake."

Don't Buy a Wagon Until You Have Seen the Columbus

Before you decide ou any wagon, examine the Columbus. Strongly built of the best possible material the Columbus wagon gives the most satisfactory service for the longest period of years. There is no secret in the notedly long life of the Columbus wagon. It is the result of the methods employed in construction. There is no wood in this wagon which has not been air-dried under shelter from one to two years.

The axies and the spokes of the wheels are hickory; the hounds, bolsters and sandboards are oak, and the bottom of the box is straight grained flawless pine. These are just a few examples of the care which is taken to make this wagon as reliable as possible. The result is that the Columbus wagon is unbeatable in reliability and endurance. Come in and examine it for yourself. We know you will be pleased.

AUCTION SALE OF MARES

TUESDAY, SEPT 11.

At Stanford, Ky., at 10:30 Rain or Shine.

We have been asked by some of the best farmers to bring a car load of heavy percheron mares to Stanford, Ky. The kind that would make good heavy draft mares. We have carefully bought a car load of the best bred and best kind that could be found. These mares are not branded, 2 to 4 years old and weigh from 900 to 1209 pounds. They are in good shape, the kind to raise good mule colts from--some good match teams. Don't fail to attend this sale for we will sell every one on this date regardless of price. No bybidders -- A fair deal to all.
